Correspondence of Doane Robinson added to South Dakota Digital Archives

PIERRE, S.D. – Historical correspondence of Doane Robinson, first secretary of the South Dakota State Historical Society, is now available on the South Dakota Digital Archives.

Jonah Leroy (Doane) Robinson (1856-1946) was secretary of the South Dakota State Historical Society and superintendent of the State Department of History from 1901-1926. The Doane Robinson Collection consists of correspondence, manuscripts, poetry, genealogical data, census and related statistics, and miscellaneous papers.

“Doane Robinson is the patriarch of South Dakota history,” said State Archivist Chelle Somsen, with the State Historical Society at the Cultural Heritage Center in Pierre. “His correspondence provides insight into a wide range of historical topics and individuals throughout South Dakota.”

Volunteers scanned 3,689 documents comprising 56 folders of correspondence creating 4.64 gigabytes of digital information. This amounts to only 20 percent of the total folders in the Robinson collection.

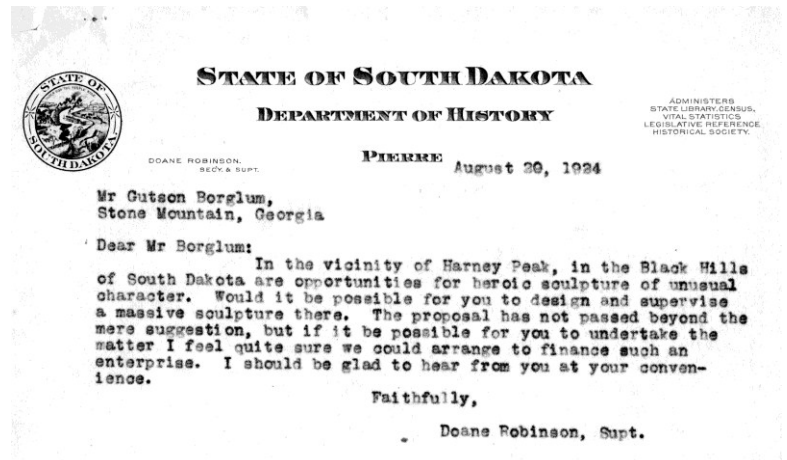

“The scanning of the collection will be an ongoing project,” Somsen said. “These specific folders were chosen because they contain some of the most requested correspondence in the Robinson collection.”

Some of the subjects from the Robinson collection added to the South Dakota Digital Archives include correspondence relating to Mount Rushmore, Peter Norbeck, La Verendrye, Arthur Mellette, Sacagawea, South Dakota State Capitol artwork, Martin Charger, Royal C. Johnson, William Henry Harrison Beadle, Valentine T. McGillycuddy and state census materials.

To access the digital collections, visit the State Archives website at history.sd.gov/archives and find the link to “Doane Robinson” under “In The News.”

The South Dakota Digital Archives, an online resource, was launched in January 2012 by the South Dakota State Historical Society to provide researchers digital access to unique historical records. There are currently more than 46,000 images (including photographs, manuscripts, government collection finding aids and land survey field notes) available for viewing.

The State Archives is a program of the South Dakota Historical Society. State Archives staff are available to help assist with research and can be reached at (605) 773-3804 or archref@state.sd.us. For more information, visit www.history.sd.gov/Archives.
