3:00 p.m.
Benjamin Reifel's Philosophy of Indian Affairs
Sean J. Flynn
Throughout his earlier career with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and as the first Lakota to serve in Congress, Reifel worked to bring economic success to the reservations and to South Dakota as a whole, dividing his time between agriculture policy and Indian affairs. A bilingual member of the Rosebud Sioux Tribe of South Dakota, Reifel often found his ideas challenged by American Indian activists. He advocated for his people to become self-reliant citizens, not by abandoning traditional values, but through education and integration.

4:00 p.m.
Archaeologists T.H. Lewis & W.H. Over
Renee M. Boen
Land surveyor and amateur archaeologist T.H. Lewis was the first to document many thousands of mounds, landforms, rock formations, and earthworks as part of the extensive late 19th century Northwestern Archaeological Survey of the upper plains. In 1889 this work included documenting the Snake Butte Turtle Effigy near Pierre and the mapping of Blood Run, an Oneota village in SE South Dakota and NW Iowa.

W.H. Over was a professor at USD who studied natural sciences and paleontology. His later interest in the human past led to expeditions to the Missouri River and documented extant villages. During two field seasons, he found and recorded 156 sites and laid groundwork for the future of archaeology on the Missouri River and in the Dakotas. Over served first as the Assistant Curator and then full Curator for the University Museum, now the W.H. Over Museum. He modernized the museum and made unique contributions to archaeology, paleontology, and the natural sciences.

8:30 a.m.
From Owned to Landowners: The African American Homesteader Community in Sully County
Jacob K. Friefeld
The Blair Colony, also known as The Sully County Colored Colony, became a haven for African-Americans seeking a road out of the racially oppressive Deep South in the late 1800s. Credit for the thriving rural neighborhood goes largely to Norvel Blair and his family. The colony had as many as 200 members and was a bustling community for over 50 years with a number of locally prominent families. Hard times in the 1930s drove many to larger cities. By the 1950s only a handful of people remained in the area.

9:30 a.m. Vendor Break

10:00 a.m. Stan Adelstein and the Jewish Presence in South Dakota
Eric Steven Zimmer

Born in 1931 in Sioux City, Iowa, former State Senator Stanford Adelstein attended school in Rapid City, South Dakota. He is a well-known businessman, politician and philanthropist in South Dakota and nationally. He served in both the South Dakota House of Representatives and the South Dakota Senate. He was an appointed member to the National Council on Economic Opportunity, the Advisory Council for the Ninth Federal Reserve Bank in Minneapolis, and the South Dakota Advisory Committee for the U.S. Civil Rights Committee.

11:00 a.m. Indigenous Feminist: Zitkala-Ša/Gertrude Simmons Bonnin's Fight for Suffrage and Self-Determination
Cathleen D. Cahill

Yankton Dakota Sioux writer, editor, translator, musician, educator, and political activist; became secretary for the Society of American Indians and moved to Washington DC to lobby for the organization; “1926 she founded the National Council of American Indians which identified land and resource issues facing Indian people; was instrumental in persuading The General Federation of Women’s Clubs to form their Indian Welfare Committee”
