Additional Information:

The South Dakota State Historical Society, Archaeological Research Center (Center) maintains archival records for archaeological sites, surveys, technical reports, maps, ArcMap data, photographs, and artifact catalogs. Record formats include paper, PDFs, Microsoft Access databases, ArcMap shapefiles, and an online database, <http://hawken.sdsmt.edu>. Named the Archaeological Resources Management System (ARMS), it is owned, maintained, and updated by the Center. It includes information from Federal, State, and private land within South Dakota. Federal land managing agencies own and control the data they provide. The State owns and controls data from State and private lands.

Under Federal and State laws the data is only available to professional archaeologists and on an as-needed basis to Federal or State land management agencies. The State of South Dakota is not responsible for the accuracy of the data or liable for any costs of damages incurred by users.

A User License is required to access the non-public data in ARMS and the conditions described above apply.

See Administrative Rules of South Dakota 24:52:05:02 for the current fee schedule.
